Let's Start!

Let's review!

Learning Outcome

Describe complicated or unusual events in the past through a wider range of B1 language in both work and social contexts.

Ask your partner:

- Have you been thinking about changing your work recently? Why or Why not?
- What job would you choose? Why?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about things I have done or have been doing.
- I can offer advice, solutions, or opinions about jobs and work.
- I can talk about causes and effects.

Let's Explore!

Peter and Sally talk about Angela. Does she have what it takes*?

* "Does (she) have what it takes?" is a common expression meaning "Is (she) good enough for the job?"

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

Sally: Hi Peter!

Peter: So, any progress on the new candidate?

Sally: Angela? I had coffee with her yesterday.

Peter: And how is she?

Sally: Well, I have been thinking a lot about this question. She's very interested in breaking into the field. Angela has been very self-motivated. She has been taking courses in journalism, and she has created a very impressive portfolio.

Peter: But ...

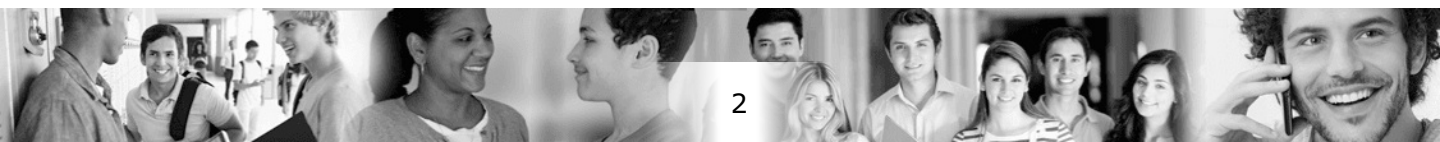

Sally: Well, to tell you the truth, I've been having some doubts. She seems like a bit of an introvert. Journalism is such a fast-paced environment. If you miss an opportunity to talk to someone, you may not get your story. She also looks a bit disorganized. She will lose track of her ideas if she isn't well organized.

Peter: You could get to know her a bit more. She looked like she was very ambitious and pro-active.

Sally: Maybe she is. She seems reserved around new people. If she is shy, she won't be able to start conversations. They are the backbone of our livelihood. She should really think about her personality type. If she has what it takes, we would love to hire her.

Peter: I would give her a chance. Journalists can't be too outgoing. If they talk too much, they forget how to listen.

Sally: What did you say? Sorry, I wasn't listening.

Let's Practice!

Sally and Peter share their ideas and opinions.

Instructions: Read the dialogue again. Select the correct answer.

- 1) Sally thinks that Angela is ...
 - a. self-motivated.
 - b. well organized.
 - c. an extrovert.
- 2) Sally thinks that the field of journalism is ...
 - a. reserved.
 - b. outgoing.
 - c. fast-paced.
- 3) Peter thinks that Sally ...
 - a. would be a good journalist.
 - b. could hire Angela.
 - c. should give Angela a chance.

Let's Practice!

Sally has been thinking about Angela.

Instructions: Read the sentences. Write the missing words. Use the words from the box below.

been / creating / having / being / thought / taking / taken / thinking / had / created

- 1) Angela has _____ very self-motivated.
- 2) She has _____ a very impressive portfolio.
- 3) I have been _____ a lot about this question.

Learning Points

Present Perfect Continuous vs. Present Perfect Tenses

You use these tenses to express that an action began in the past and is still going on or has just finished.

We use the Present Perfect tense mainly to express that an action is completed or to emphasize the result.

Forms:

Regular verbs: form of have + base form of verb + -ed

Example: I have worked at the bakery for six years.

Irregular verbs: form of have + past participle of irregular verbs

Example: I have written a number of books in the last two years.

We use the Present Perfect Continuous tense to emphasize the duration or continuous course of an action.

Form:

Form of have + been + base form of verb + -ing

Example: We have been walking for two hours!

Because you are talking about the continuous course of an action, you often use a time marker with Present Perfect Continuous tense, like:

- for two hours
- for a long time
- for ages

Examples:

- Angela has been very self-motivated.
- She has created a very impressive portfolio.
- I have been thinking a lot about this question.
- She has been taking courses in journalism.

Learning Points

Conditional Sentences with If-Clauses

You use conditional sentences with If--clauses to talk about real possibilities in the future.

You use the First Conditional to say it's possible that you will do something. In that condition, something else may, will or will not happen.

The parts of the sentence are divided into two clauses: the If-clause and the condition clause.

The If-clause can go at the start or the end of the sentence.

When the If-clause starts a sentence, you separate the two clauses with a comma. When the main clause starts the sentence, you do not use a comma.

1st Clause	2nd Clause	Meaning
If you miss an opportunity to talk to someone,	... you may not get your story.	It's possible you miss an opportunity to talk to someone. In this condition: you may not get your story.
She will lose track of her ideas ...	... if she isn't well organized.	It's possible she isn't well organized. In this condition: she will lose track of her ideas.

Examples:

- If you miss an opportunity to talk to someone, you may not get your story.
- She will lose track of her ideas if she isn't well organized.
- If journalists talk too much, they forget how to listen.
